Episcopal Networks and Authority in Late Antique Egypt Bishops of the Theban Region at Work by R. Dekker
This book examines how two bishops in the Theban region contributed to the rise of a new, anti-Chalcedonian church hierarchy, which became the forerunner of the Coptic Orthodox Church. Abraham of Hermonthis (ca. 590-621) and Pesynthius of Koptos (599-632) are exceptional, since a large number of their professional documents is preserved. By applying Social Network Analysis to these documents, the author reconstructed their individual social networks and linked them to a wider regional network. 366p (Peeters Publishers, April 2018, Orientalia Lovaniensia Analecta 264) hardcover, 9789042935600, $120.00. Decoding Signs of Identity Egyptian Workmen’s Marks in Archaeological, Historical, Comparative and Theoretical Perspective edited by B.J.J. Haring, K.J. van der Moel and D.M. Soliman
This is a volume of proceedings that investigate identity marks of Ancient Egyptian workmen, both in an in-depth manner and a more general perspective. In three sections, the topic is narrowed down from general considerations to various sorts of Ancient Egyptian identity marks, and finally to the specific marking system of the royal necropolis workforce of the Egyptian New Kingdom. 224p (Peeters Publishers, December 2018, Egyptologische Uitgaven - Egyptological Publications 32) paperback, 9789042937055, $77.00. Le temple égyptien et ses dieux Itinéraire du divin
by Sylvie Cauville and Mohammed Ibrahim Ali Philae, Kom Ombo, Edfu, Esna, and Dendara are the most visited temples of the Greco-Roman period. Their walls are covered with texts. The late Egyptian religious monuments would be nothing more than masses of stone if they did not maintain, through their decoration and texts, the memory of the pharaoh god who perpetuated life in the old country. Naga ed-Deir in the First Intermediate Period
by Edward Brovarski
Beginning in 1901, George A. Reisner conducted a number of excavating campaigns in the neighborhood of the modern village of Naga ed-Deir in Upper Egypt, opposite the ancient city of Thinis. This volume endeavors to date the material found by Reisner, including the inscribed stones published by Dunham, with a view to elucidating the history of the site in the period between the Old and Middle Kingdoms.

The History of Phoenicia
by Josette Elayi
The history of the Phoenicians, explorers and merchants, is little known. What a paradox for this ingenious people, who invented the alphabet, to have left so few written traces of their existence. And yet this civilization fired the imagination of its contemporaries, inspiring terror among the Romans and Greeks, who depicted them as a cruel people. Buried beneath the modern cities of Lebanon, Josette Elayi has resuscitated ancient Phoenicia.

Hathor’s Alchemy
The Ancient Egyptian Roots of the Hermetic Art
by Alison M. Roberts Ever since alchemy first emerged in Graeco-Roman Egypt, alchemists have said their wisdom came from the pharaonic temples. Focusing on the beautiful temples at Abu Simbel and Dendara, dedicated to the fiery serpent-eye goddess Hathor, this groundbreaking book explores for the first time the legacy left to alchemists by the pharaohs. It also goes deep into Ramesses VI’s extraordinary tomb at Thebes to discover the secrets of growth and renewal guarded by Hathor’s copper love.

Egypt’s Role in the Hebrew Bible edited by Thomas Römer and Shirly Ben-Dor Evian
When dealing with Egyptian backgrounds and allusions to Egyptian documents and practices in the Hebrew Bible, scholars have tended to draw on Egyptian records dating to the second millennium BCE. Yet, in the field of ancient Near Eastern studies, most of these biblical texts are considered to be compositions dating to subsequent millennium. This volume explores the Egypt-Bible interface within this chronological constraint.

Time and Space at Issue in Ancient Egypt edited by Gaëlle Chantrain and Jean Winand

This volume is a collection of papers that were presented during the international conference Time and Space in Ancient Egypt organized by the Université catholique de Louvain and the Université de Liège (Louvain-la-Neuve, 9–11 June 2016). The participants were invited to examine in the broadest possible way the interactions between the expressions of time and space. This volume does not pretend to come with definitive solutions or conclusions, even less, with a new theory. As suggested in the title, one of our main goals was to problematize these topics by promoting interdisciplinary discussions on possible links of interconnectivity between time and space, two among the most basic modes of cultural organization. 242p, 11 col & 83 b/w illus (Widmaier Verlag, December 2018, Lingua Aegyptia Studia Monographica 19) paperback, 9783943955194, $75.00. Book of the Dead Becoming God in Ancient Egypt
edited by Foy Scalf

This book explores what the Book of the Dead was to the ancient Egyptians, what it means to us today, what it was believed to do, how it worked, how it was made, and ultimately what happened to it. The volume includes fourteen essays showcasing the latest research on the Book of the Dead written by thirteen internationally renown experts as well as a complete catalog of the forty-five objects on display in an associated exhibit at the Oriental Institute Museum. Two famous Book of the Dead papyri, Papyrus Milbank and Papyrus Ryerson, are reproduced in their entirety with full-color photographs among nearly 400 illustrations for the first time. Discover how the ancient Egyptians controlled their immortal destiny and sought close association with the gods through the Book of the Dead.

The Great Hypostyle Hall in the Temple of Amun at Karnak Parts 2 and 3: Translation and Commentary by Peter J. Brand, William J. Murnane and Rosa Erika Feleg

Standing at the heart of Karnak Temple, the Great Hypostyle Hall is a forest of 134 giant sandstone columns enclosed by massive walls. Sety I built the Great Hypostyle Hall ca. 1300 BCE and decorated the northern wing with exquisite bas reliefs. After his death, his successor Ramesses II completed the southern wing mostly in sunk relief. This volume provides full translation, epigraphic analysis, and photographic documentation of the elaborate wall reliefs inside the Hall. This vast trove of ritual art and texts attest to the richness and vitality of Egyptian civilization at the height of its imperial power. The present volume builds upon and serves as a companion to an earlier volume of drawings of the wall scenes made by Harold H. Nelson in the 1950s and edited for publication by William J. Murnane in 1981.

The Anubieion at Saqqara IV
Pottery of the Late Dynastic Period with Comparative Material from the Sacred Animal Necropolis by Peter French and Janine Bourriau
This volume continues the ceramic history of the Saqqara Anubis temple, excavated by the Egypt Exploration Society from 1977 to 1979. It covers the Late Dynastic Period. From at least the mid-sixth century onwards, burials appear to have been made in the earlier shaft tombs as well as in a new cemetery in the sand. A temple to Anubis, god of the dead, was commenced at the same time, abandoned during the Persian Period but restarted around 400 BC. The ceramics include bowls used by the embalmers as well as offering vessels and the repertoire of the fourth century builders. Unpublished contemporary ceramics from the nearby Sacred Animal Necropolis elucidate and supplement the Anubieion record.

Urban Network Evolutions Towards a High-Definition Archaeology edited by Rubina Raja and Soren M. Sindbaek Urban Network Evolutions reviews the new approaches to urban evolution as archaeology endeavors to characterize both the scale and pace of historical events and processes. The 40 contributors demonstrate how new techniques for refining archaeological dates, contexts, and the provenance ascribed to material culture, afford a new high-definition approach to the study of global and interregional dynamics.

Decorated Pottery in Cyprus and Philistia in the 12th Century BC Cypriot IIIC and Philistine IIIC
by Penelope Mountjoy
This book comprises a study of the 12th century BC Aegean-style pottery from all the main Cypriot sites together with the contemporary Aegean-style pottery from the three excavated Philistine sites of Ekron, Ashkelon and Ashdod. As part of the project Neutron Activation Analysis of pottery from ten of the Cypriot sites has been carried out in Bonn to obtain the chemical profile of each site, thus enabling movement of pottery round the island to be recorded and contacts between specific Cypriot sites and the Near East to be highlighted. The book presents in full detail the latest information from both excavation and study concerning a key period in the history of the Eastern Mediterranean region. The relevant stratigraphy at each site is discussed and documented with plans and sections, and the pottery comprehensively illustrated with line drawings.

The Interactions of Ancient Astral Science
by David Brown
Why and when did ancient scholars make the enormous effort to understand the principles and master the mathematics of foreign astral sciences? This work provides a detailed analysis of the invention, development and transmission of astronomy, astrology, astral religion, magic and medicine, cosmology and cosmography, astral mapping, geography and calendrics and their related mathematics and instrumentation in and between Mesopotamia, Egypt, the West Semitic areas, Greece and Rome, Iran, India and China. It considers the available textual evidence from the most ancient times to the seventh century CE. The author has worked the contributions of eight internationally renowned scholars into what amounts to a new history of the oldest sciences. The result is a challenging read for the layperson and a resource for the expert, and includes an extensive index to the entire volume.

Antike Theaterbauten Ein Handbuch
by Hans Peter Isler
With the exception of the temple buildings, the theaters are indeed the most diffused building type in Classical Antiquity. The purpose of this study is to better understand the invention and the development of the architectural type of the Greek and Roman theater from the beginning in archaic times until the end of the Roman Empire. The diffusion of ancient theater buildings covers the entire ancient world, from Al Khanoun, in the northeast of modern Afghanistan, on the borders to Tadschikistan, to Odispo in modern Portugal, and from Camulodunum in England to Oxyrhynchos and Antinoe in Egypt and Petra in southern Jordan. In the catalogue all theaters documented by material remains are described and analyzed. German text.

Eine magische Stele aus dem Badischen Landesmuseum Karlsruhe (Inv. H 1049)
by Joachim Friedrich Quack
A fragmented Egyptian limestone stele, possession of the Badisches Landesmuseum Karlsruhe, dates around the 19th — 22nd dynasty and shows a scheme of ornaments and inscriptions that deal with dangerous animals. The scheme especially shows recitation sayings against crocodiles and snakes, stylized by the deity fiends, Maga and Apopis. The saying referring to Apopis is known from many other sources from the 20th dynasty to the late 4th century CE. However, it is transmitted in various ways and differs in detail by diverging mediums. The present publication discusses the stele by referring to its materiality, reconstructs its ancient and modern biography, and offers a translation of the sayings by means of a detailed commentary. This work also includes a photographic and graphical documentation and indices. German text.

Abū Minā IV
Das Ostraka-Haus und die Weinpresse
by Peter Grossmann
The Ostraca House in Abu Mena is a medium-sized multi-story building, which was badly destroyed by fire after the Arab conquest of Egypt (at around 639/42). It led archeologists to the discovery of nearly 2000 Greek ostraca. In this volume Peter Grossmann examines the origins of these ostraca. The house was an official building owned privately, which had, among other things, something to do with the organization of the grape harvest and the payment of grape pickers in the surrounding vineyards. In addition, there was a larger abutting complex of buildings in the immediate vicinity, with five closely-packed presses built at different times, which would suggest that it makes sense to link the excavated ostraca to the existence of these presses. These are the only presses that were allowed to remain under Roman control within the holy precinct (temenos), which suggests that they were, in part at least, private ecclesiastical possessions. This is also confirmed by the fact that the ostraca are written exclusively in Greek. German text.

Hieratische Ostraka und Namensteine aus Dra‘ Abu el-Naga
by Günter Burkard
In Dra‘ Abu el-Naga II the hieratic ostraca and name stones are presented for the first time. They all come from the area of the K93.12 complex, in other words from that of high priest Amenhotep, and were for the most part integrated into the masonry of its now destroyed mudbrick pyramid. Presumably, these are the names of people involved in the renovation of the facility, in other words of the workers employed there. The nearly 100 names, including about 70 different individual names, represent a credible list of those involved in the construction of the pyramid and the tomb. The scattered findings from the other parts of the complex also contain mostly non-literary content. While the earliest text mentions the name of King Nubchepere-Intef, and therefore dates from the late 17th Dynasty, the most recent document bears the name of high priest Menkheperre of the 21st Dynasty. German text.

Die Philensis-Dekrete Untersuchungen über zwei Synodal-dekrete aus der Zeit Ptolemaios’ V. und ihre geschichtliche und religiöse Bedeutung by Daniel von Recklinghausen Among the important historical and religious records of the Ptolemaic period belong the so-called “synodal decrees,” which were adopted by synods of Egyptian priests. Daniel von Recklinghausen presents a new edition of all known hieroglyphic and demotics texts in order to offer a complete edition of “Philensis I” and “Philensis II” from the reign of Ptolemy V. The focus of this study is on the mechanisms that enabled the priest to establish the cultic worship of the Macedonian rulers in the temples of the gods. German text.

Ägypten und der Christliche Orient Peter Nagel zum 80. Geburtstag edited by Heike Behlmer, Ute Pietruschka and Frank Feder For good reason, this publication in honor of Peter Nagel’s 80th birthday forms the first volume of the new series Texts and Studies on the Coptic Bible, as Peter Nagel is one of the foremost specialists on the tradition of the Coptic Old Testament, whose most important fields of activity include research into the Coptic language and the culture and religion of Late Antiquity and Byzantine to early Islamic Egypt. In 22 contributions, students and colleagues of the honoree reflect not only the Coptological core topics of his work, but the entire range of his scientific interests, which also include the languages and cultures of the Christian Orient, especially in Syria, Nubia, and Ethiopia, as well as Pharaonic Egypt. Four contributions lead the reader into modern times and the present, thus rounding off the volume. English and German text. 334p (Harrassowitz Verlag, April 2018, Texte und Studien zur Koptischen Bibel. Texts and Studies on the Coptic Bible 1) hardcover, 9783447110310, $106.00. Die Gefässverschlüsse aus Grab N13.1 in Assiut
by Michael Van Elsbergen Tomb N13.1 which stands on high ground in the western rock necropolis of Asyut in Middle Egypt was built for the local ruler Iti-ibi (-i-ker) during the 11th Dynasty, in the period around 2000 BC. All of the 900 vessel closures made of Nile clay (as well as a single limestone closure) which were found here are described in detail in this volume and their relevance examined. German text. 166p (Harrassowitz Verlag, October 2018, The Asyut Project 10) hardcover, 9783447110976, $92.00. Special Offer $74.00

Georg Steindorff
Stationen seines Lebens
Georg Steindorff (1861–1951) belongs to the generation of humanists who in many ways crossed conventional boundaries in the study of Egyptian antiquity, at a time when the German Empire was undergoing an economic boom. This publication brings the life of Georg Steindorff and his family into focus for a wider public. It is the product of intense work, made possible by the generous transfer of Georg Steindorff’s estate, including several thousand papers, by his grandson, Thomas Hemer (1924-2013). German text. 78p (Harrassowitz Verlag, June 2018, Kleine Schriften Leipzig 11) paperback, 9783447110723, $25.00. Special Offer $20.00

Die Statue Assiut S10/16 Ein Regionalstil und seine Bewertung
by Jochem Kahl
In this investigation, Jochem Kahl discusses sites, dating, workshops, users and the function of statues of an Asyut regional style, as well as how they are assessed within the field of Egyptology. He thereby demonstrates that the statues were placed in tombs both at the end of the First Intermediate Period and in the early Middle Kingdom and that their production was not subject to political conditions or technical shortcomings. The work is completed by comprehensive photographic documentation of all of the statues currently accessible within this group. German text. 180p (Harrassowitz Verlag, February 2019, The Asyut Project 11) hardcover, 9783447111119, $73.00. Special Offer $59.00

Museum Politicum
by Elke Blumenthal
On the occasion of the 40th anniversary of the reopening of the Egyptian Museum of the University of Leipzig, Elke Blumenthal, its longtime director, tells the story of the museum’s eventful history following its closure after the bombing raids of 1943, the years of the GDR, the time of the “Wende” and the period up to the present day. Les ostraca grecs et coptes du monastère de Baouit
by Serena Lopizzo
In 2005, the Bible + Orient Foundation at the University of Fribourg (Switzerland) enhanced its collection with a group of 68 ostraca, written in Coptic and Ancient Greek. The documentary texts on the ostraca concern the economic management of the monastery and were used for delivery requests of food, especially grain, from the surrounding fields. French text.

Landscape Archaeology

Egypt and the Mediterranean World edited by Yann Tristant and Mathieu Ghilardi

Geoarchaeological methodologies have emerged as a major component in archaeological approaches to better understand both the dynamics of the establishment of ancient environments and the variety of settlement patterns adopted. Thirteen contributions give an overview of the complex relationships between landscape dynamics and the logics of human occupation through the results of recent studies. English and French text. 296p, 78 illus (Institut Français d’Archéologie Orientale, January 2018, Bibliothèque d’étude 169) hardcover, 9782724707083, $87.00. Special Offer $70.00

Céramiques égyptiennes au Soudan ancien Importations, imitations et influences edited by Romain David

This volume combines the results of different researches undertaken on Egyptian and Mediterranean ceramics unearthed in Sudan, as well as studies on the influences that such material had on the local Sudanese production from the Middle Kingdom up to the end of medieval times. It presents a first synthesis of the material of still poorly-documented regions. French text. 344p (Institut Français d’Archéologie Orientale, July 2018, Cahiers de la céramique égyptienne 11) hardcover, 9782724707199, $66.00. Special Offer $53.00

Egyptian Hoards I
The Ptolemies
by Thomas Faucher, Andrew Meadows and Catharine Lorber

The first volume of Egyptian Hoards offers a complete list of 278 hoards containing Ptolemaic coins in gold, silver, or bronze, found in Egypt and in the sphere of influence of the Lagid kings. Forty-nine of these hoards are documented here for the first time. The volume presents and analyzes the new hoards, enlarged hoards, and older hoards restudied in light of recent numismatic scholarship. 608p, 236 illus (Institut Français d’Archéologie Orientale, December 2017, Bibliothèque d’étude 168) hardcover, 9782724706895, $111.00. Les textes de la pyramide de Pépy Ier
by Bernard Mathieu

The inscribed walls of the inner chambers and corridors of Pepy I’s pyramid, the third Pharaoh of the 6th Dynasty (c. 2330–2280 BCE), offer the largest set of Pyramid Texts known. The translation of about 800 spells, including 81 “new” ones (PT 1001–1081), is preceded by a general presentation of the whole corpus. French text. 668p (Institut Français d’Archéologie Orientale, December 2018, Mémoires publiés par les membres de l’Institut français d’archéologie orientale 142) hardcover, 9782724707274, $111.00. Karnak, Amon-Ré La genèse d’un temple, la naissance d’un Dieu
by Luc Gabolde

This volume proposes new hypotheses on the development of Karnak and the rise of the cult of Amun. Amun-Re, though a new one god, was not created ex nihilo. For those rulers coming from the South, Amun-Re became the god they had revealed and whom the previous kings had not known how to recognize. French text. 744p, 274 illus (Institut Français d’Archéologie Orientale, January 2018, Bibliothèque d’étude 167) hardcover, 9782724706864, $103.00. Special Offer $83.00

El-Hobagi Une nécropole de rang impérial au Soudan Central by Patrice Lenoble

Of the seven large tumuli covering the graves of kings, all enclosed by a wall of unusual form, two were excavated. Each grave produced exceptional weaponry, insignia of Meroitic royalty. There was also an astonishing series of vessels in bronze engraved with motifs or scenes and used for ritual purposes. The dating of the material and that derived from radiocarbon analysis place el-Hobagi in the 4th century, at the beginning of the pivotal period of the transfer of the capital towards Soba. French text. 352p, 85 col & 116 b/w illus (Institut Français d’Archéologie Orientale, May 2018, Fouilles de l’Institut français d’archéologie orientale 79) hardcover, 9782724707250, $79.00. Cultural Plurality in Ancient Magical Texts and Practices

Graeco-Egyptian Handbooks and Related Traditions

edited by Ljuba Merlina Bortolani, William Furley, Svenja Nagel and Joachim Friedrich Quack

This collection of essays explores the multifaceted aspects of magical texts and practices in antiquity, focusing on the Graeco-Egyptian magical papyri. The authors explore questions of cultural plurality and fusion, ranging from earlier Egyptian, Mesopotamian and Greek traditions, through the developments of Graeco-Roman Egypt, up to their integration into Jewish and Byzantine magical lore.

Schrift und Material

Praktische Verwendung religiöser Text- und Bildträger als Artefakte im Alten Ägypten

edited by Joachim Friedrich Quack and Daniela C. Luft

Texts and images do not exist independently of their carrier objects: they facilitate their distribution and use. However, the characteristics of carriers were adapted to the use, as was the selection of texts and images. This interplay of interdependencies is considered theoretically and on the basis of ancient Egyptian sources, offering up fresh approaches to two old questions. The consequences for the possible scope and limits of archaeological reconstruction of past contexts lead on to methodological self-reflection in the field of Egyptology. In addition, opportunities to describe complex action-patterns in former times relationships are unveiled. German text.

Martyrs and Archangels

Coptic Literary Texts from the Pierpont Morgan Library

edited by Matthias Müller and Sami Uljas

The three hitherto unpublished Coptic literary texts edited and translated here derive from the famous monastery of St Michael at Hamuli. They contain a prime example of the so-called ‘epic’ type of Egyptian martyrdom literature, anciently translated literature with interesting deviations, and a sermon on St. Michael the Archangel.

Teaching Morality in Antiquity

Wisdom Texts, Oral Traditions, and Images

edited by T.M. Oshima

The eighteen articles collected in this volume are the results of an international workshop. During the workshop, fruitful discussions on diverse issues related to the theme “wisdom texts and morality” developed regarding biblical wisdom texts and their parallels from the ancient Egypt, ancient Mesopotamia, and the ancient Levant - more specifically: moral messages and rhetoric in wisdom texts; questions of theodicy; and many more.

Egyptian and Roman Antiquities, and Renaissance Decorative Arts
by Elena Vaiani, Simonetta Prosperi Valenti Rodinò and Helen Whitehouse
This catalogue includes almost 400 drawings of mainly small antiquities such as vases, lamps, mirrors, tripods, bells, armor, weights, measures, musical instruments, mirrors, brooches and jewelry, as well as designs for Renaissance and seventeenth-century vases, candelabra, princely gold and silver tableware. Amongst the antiquities are a distinct group of Egyptian artifacts and some of the earliest known records of Greek vases, together with countless objects of everyday life. Amongst the modern designs are works by sixteenth- and seventeenth-century Italian artists such as Luzio Luzzi, Giovanni Battista Montano, Giovanni Angelo Canini, Lelio Orsi and others.

Papyrus Amherst 63
by Karel van der Toorn
This book offers a transliteration and translation of a text that has long been referred to as a “mystery papyrus.” The scribes of Papyrus Amherst 63 used the Demotic script to put down in writing a compilation of Aramaic texts. This unusual combination of script and language necessitates the collaboration of scholars from different disciplines.

ARCANE
Interregional Vol. II: Artefacts
edited by Marc Lebeau
The second interregional volume of the ARCANE collection gathers contributions concerning artifacts that were produced from Egypt to Iran and from Thrace to Southern Mesopotamia across the third millennium BCE. These contributions are based primarily on artifacts from secure stratigraphical contexts. They present the most recent and complete update on Near and Middle Eastern artifact production throughout the Early Bronze Age. As an integral component of the ARCANE Programme, the volume provides a careful examination of interregional contacts and allows for a deeper understanding of fine-tuning of the relative chronologies of the entire area.

Naga V Skulptur
edited by Sylvia Schoske
Due to the diversity and the undisturbed context of the findings, the excavations conducted by the State Museum of Egyptian Art Munich at the Meroitic city Naga in the Sudan have become a reference parameter for other archaeological sites in the region. Therefore, it seems necessary to put the publication of the excavations at Naga in a broader scientific context. The new multilingual scientific series Archaeology in the Sudan creates a forum offering our colleagues active in Sudanese archaeology the possibility to publish their researches promptly and on a high editorial and printing level. German text.

Himmlisch!
Die Eisenobjekte aus dem Grab des Tutanchamun
by Katja Broschat, Christian Eckmann, Christian Koeberl, Eid Mertah and Florian Ströbele About 5400 objects accompany the young Pharaoh Tutankhamun on his last journey. They are, until now, the unique nearly completely preserved burial equipment of an ancient Egyptian king. Among the numerous metal objects is a small group of iron objects which have always provoked a particular interest—they were produced in a time, in which Egypt was far from knowing the technique of iron smelting, not to mention the capacity of applying it. This book presents new research on one of the most famous grave finds of archaeology. German text.
