Hadith, Piety, and Law Selected Studies
by Christopher Melchert
Through close readings of works on fiqh, meticulous unpacking of data in biographical dictionaries, and careful attention to curricular, pious, pedagogical, and scholarly practices, Melchert has illuminated the processes and procedures that undergirded the development of Islamic movements and institutions in the formative period of Islam. The present volume brings together sixteen of his articles, including those considered his most important.

Al-Māmūn, the Inquisition, and the Quest for Caliphal Authority
by John Abdallah Nawas
The “inquisition” (mihna) unleashed by the seventh Abbasid caliph has long attracted the attention of modern scholars. Because this event appears at a convergence of prominent currents in systematic theology, rationalist thought, theocratic politics, and nascent trends in Shiism and Sunnism, it is seen as the key to a wide array of puzzles and problems in early Islamic history. In this incisive study, John Nawas subjects the various proposed explanations to a searching analysis.

Imperial Power and Maritime Trade Mecca and Cairo in the Later Middle Ages
by John L. Meloy
Using sources composed by late medieval Meccan scholars alongside the more well-known Mamluk material, this study presents the history of late medieval Mecca and the Sharifs who ruled the city by examining their relations with local and global forces: their alliances with local groups in the Hijaz, their relations with the imperial center of Mamluk Cairo, and their reliance on the maritime trade of the Indian Ocean. This revised second edition includes a new preface.

The Caliphate and Islamic Statehood Formation, Fragmentation and Modern Interpretations edited by Carool Kersten

Although the Caliphate was formally abolished ninety years ago, it had already ceased to exist as a unitary and effectively administered political institution many centuries earlier. The ever-widening gap between political ideal and historical reality is also reflected in the varying conceptualizations and theories of the Caliphate developed by Islamic religious scholars and Muslim intellectuals past and present. However, recent events in the Islamic world show that the idea of a Caliphate still appeals to Muslims of varying persuasions. This three-volume reference work tracks the history of the Caliphate as what many Muslims believe to be a genuine and authentic Islamic political institution: From its emergence in seventh-century Arabia until highly contested and controversial attempts of its revival at the beginning of the twenty-first century by radical Islamists in Afghanistan and Iraq.

Trial and Tribulation in the Qur’an
A Mystical Theodicy
by Nasrin Rouzati

This book offers a critical analysis and re-examination of the notion of Divine trial, first by providing a comprehensive typology and a contextual interpretation of the Qur’anic narratives pertaining to the concept. Divine trial is then investigated through a historical review of prophetic tradition (hadith) and the exegetical literature (tafsir), followed by a discussion on Prophetology, and an overview of bala in the lives of the prophets.

The Changing Energy Landscape in the Gulf Strategic Implications
edited by Gawdat Bahgat

Extreme fluctuations in oil prices raise important strategic questions for both importers and exporters. In this volume, specialists from the US, the Middle East, Europe and Asia examine the rapidly evolving dynamic in the energy landscape, including renewable and nuclear power, challenges to producers including the shale revolution, and legal issues. Each chapter provides in-depth analysis and clear policy recommendations.

Employment and Career Motivation in the Arab Gulf States
The Rentier Mentality Revisited edited by Annika Kropf and Mohamed Aly Ramady

The notion of “rentier mentality” has haunted the literature on the Gulf States for almost 40 years now. However, few studies have actually provided insight into how the nationals themselves perceive their career motivators, employability and productivity. The eleven studies of this book present both empirical findings and case studies that reveal what nationals expect from their workplace and what hinders them from a personal, meaningful contribution.

Africa and the Gulf Region Blurred Boundaries and Shifting Ties edited by Rogaia Mustafa Abusharaf and Dale F. Eickelman
The ties that bind Africa and the Gulf region have deep historical roots that influence both what Braudel called the longue durée and the short-term events of current policy shifts, market-based economic fluctuations, and local and global political vicissitudes. This book, a collaboration of historians, political scientists, development planners, and a biomedical engineer, explores Arabian-African relationships in their many overlapping dimensions. Thus, histories constructed from the “bottom up”—records of the everyday activities of commerce, intermarriage, and gender roles—offer an incisive complement to the “top down” histories of dynasties and the elite. Topics such as migration, collective memory, scriptural and oral narratives, and contemporary notions of food security and “soft” power pose new questions about the ties that bind Africa to the Gulf.

Oil Export Economies
New Comparative Perspectives on the Arab Gulf States
by Annika Kropf
Despite their commonalities, the Arab Gulf States have started economic diversification from different settings and against different political backgrounds. This book applies a multi-method approach including Qualitative Comparative Analysis (QCA) to highlight their heterogeneous economic development trajectories and to compare them to other major oil exporters. From a political economy perspective, it demonstrates how neoclassical economic theory fails to grasp the underlying mechanisms of their development. The research design of this study is tailored to small and medium-sized samples with special characteristics. As such, it offers new opportunities for comparative studies not only of this region but also of other specific samples of countries from a wider perspective of heterodox economics.

Power and Rural Comunities in Al-Andalus Ideological and Material Representations edited by Adela Fábregas and Flocel Sabaté

This volume explores how State power can be defined in Al-Andalus and examines the features of its interaction with Islamic society. Andalusi society is viewed as a changing reality, where the tensions between the various social agents were very strong. The main components—the State and gentry-based peasant communities—experienced a deep transformation in their definition and their relationships, and the process by which these communities fell under the control of the State seems to be a one-way phenomenon. But the detection, examination, and interpretation of this process is still overdue. With the task of approaching the general transformation of Islamic society from this perspective, this collection focuses on the territorial dimension of the kinship-State dichotomy to detect its operation and to track its evolution. By adopting the assumption that territorial configuration patterns are heavily determined by the relative weight of the different authorities operating in a given territory, the papers identify the various agents operating in al-Andalus through their material remains.

Medieval Minorities
Law and Multiconfessional Societies in the Middle Ages edited by John Victor Tolan, Jerzy Mazur, Capucine Nemo-Pekelman, Nora Berend and Youna Masset

The fruit of a sustained and close collaboration between historians, linguists and jurists working on the Christian, Muslim and Jewish societies of the Middle Ages, this book explores the theme of religious coexistence from a resolutely comparative perspective. The authors concentrate on a key aspect of this coexistence: the legal status attributed to Jews and Muslims in Christendom and to dhimmis in Islamic lands. What are the similarities and differences, from the point of view of the law, between the indigenous religious minority and the foreigner? What specific treatments and procedures in the courtroom were reserved for plaintiffs, defendants or witnesses belonging to religious minorities? What role did the law play in the segregation of religious groups? Through these questions, and through the innovative comparative method applied to this book, they offer a fresh new synthesis.

The Life of Serapion and other Christian Sogdian Texts from the Manuscripts E25 and E26 edited by Nicolas Sims-Williams

The Sogdian texts published in this volume are of interest and importance in various ways. The Life of Serapion is particularly significant from a linguistic point of view, being a close translation of a known Syriac text, so that its rare words and unusual grammatical forms can be interpreted with confidence. The Life of John of Dailam, on the other hand, differs substantially from the surviving Syriac versions and preserves details unrecorded elsewhere concerning the history of western Iran in the early Islamic period. A text on omens represents an extremely ancient, pre-Christian survival, with clear parallels not only in Syriac but even in Babylonian omen texts, while a refutation of Manichaeism sheds light on the attitude of the Christian community in the Turfan oasis towards their Manichaean neighbors. All these texts are provided with translation and detailed commentary, and the volume concludes with grammatical notes, complete glossary, bibliography, index of words discussed, and eleven plates. This work will be of interest to specialists in Iranian languages, mediaeval Iran and Central Asia, Syriac literature and the history of the “Church of the East.”

Scattered Parts of a Doctrine Al-Barqi’s Role in the Making of Early Shiite Faith
by Roy Vilozny

About a century before the four canonical books of the Shia were composed, Ahmad b. Muhammad al-Barqi (d. 888 or 894 CE), a scholar from the city of Qum, compiled a large collection of Imamite traditions embracing all aspects of religious life, from cosmogony and cosmology to the minutest details of daily life. This compilation, of which only ten percent has come down to us, forms one of the earliest Shiite texts extant, and is the basis for the book’s delineation of the Shiite worldview in this formative, pre-Twelver era. Shiite ideology, the author argues, did not grow in a vacuum but resulted from the fusion of Islamic Arab elements with pre-Islamic Near Eastern mystic and gnostic traditions. The book discusses at length three fundamental notions which permeate every part of al-Barqi’s work: the Shia are God’s elect; an eternal fierce battle waged between good and evil on both the universal and individual levels; and the history of humankind as predetermined by God.

Southwest Arabia across History Essays to the Memory of Walter Dostal by Andre Gingrich and Siegfried Haas

Southwest Arabia across History honors the legacy of Walter Dostal as one of continental Europe’s most eminent scholars in the field, by offering innovative contributions in the interdisciplinary fields of South Arabian studies. These texts are presented by experts in pre-Islamic epigraphy and archaeology, regional geography and Islamic historical studies, as well as contemporary history and socio-cultural anthropology. They discuss central riddles and key issues in South Arabian studies, such as interrelations between texts and contexts, environment and economy, water management and law, conflict and mediation for peace, or tribalism and state constellations.

The Life of Muhammad Sharif
A Central Asian Sufi Hagiography in Chaghatay translated and annotated by Jeff Eden

The story of the Sufi saint Khwaja Muhammad Sharif is one of the best-loved hagiographies from East Turkistan (present-day Xinjiang, China), where the saint’s shrine remains a place of pilgrimage and devotion to this day. The Khwaja’s narrative recounts his adventures as he travels from Central Asia to Hindustan, Mecca, and back again, guided by saintly spirits and working miracles at every turn. Jeff Eden’s introduction and notes offer insights into the text and its interpretation, and his translation marks the first time that a complete East Turkistani hagiography has been made available to readers in English.

Coinage of the Iranian Huns and their Successors from Bactria and Gandhara (4th to 8th century CE)
by Klaus Vondrovec

This volume, providing a complete view of the entire coinage of the Iranian Huns, makes coins as a primary historic source accessible to the reader. The book contains 10 chapters: the Kidarites, Dinars (of the Kidarite and Alkhan period), Alkhan, Tobazini, the Hephthalites, Sasanian Coinage and Imitations, Nezak Shahs, Alkhan-Nezak Crossover, the Western Turk Period and finally Gandharan Copper. Each chapter discusses the numismatic evidence based on thorough typological analysis and a short historical overview summarizes the written sources.

The Ghurid Portal of the Friday Mosque of Herat, Afghanistan Conservation of a Historical Monument by Erik Hansen, Abdul Wasay Najimi and Claus Christensen

This book describes the architectural restoration of the monumental Ghurid portal of the Friday Mosque of Herat, a remnant of the original 12th-century architecture and decorative artwork of the Ghurids. The restoration took place under the auspices of UNESCO and the Afghan government in 1964. Photographs and field drawings illustrate this book with historic and practical accounts of the architecture and restoration of this very important monument.

Islam and the Tyranny of Authenticity An Inquiry into Disciplinary Apologetics and Self-Deception
by Aaron W. Hughes

Many scholars of Islam are interested in creating a liberal, inclusive, pluralistic, feminist, and modern version of the religion that they believe to be explicit in the pages of the Qur’an, but missed by earlier interpreters. In so doing, they create “good” Islam and, in the process, seek to define what does and does not get to count as authentic. This book provides a hard-hitting examination of the spiritual motivations, rhetorical moves, and political implications associated with these apologetical discourses. It argues that what is at stake is relevance, and examines the consequences of engaging in mythopoesis as opposed to scholarship.

Nomad Military Power in Iran and Adjacent Areas in the Islamic Period edited by Kurt Franz and Wolfgang Holzwarth

In Central Asia, the Iranian highlands and the Near East, the impact of nomadic groups on the course of history was more felt than in other parts of the world. This nomad power over the long period from the expansion of Islam to European colonial intervention is the subject of this anthology. The research focus is directed primarily on the conditions in which nomad power developed in the context of interrelated nomadic and sedentary ways of life.

Complex Predicates in Modern Persian A Functional Characterization
by Zari Saeedi

This book is concerned with the issue of predication as the central theme of all linguistic theories. In some languages ‘verbs’ are not the only predicative elements. Other word categories have the same capability. This book focuses on the constructions where a predicative adjective or preposition fuse with a ‘bleached verb’ as the impoverished form of the verbal element to form what is called a complex predicate or nuclear juncture.

Jews and Muslims in the Russian Empire and the Soviet Union edited by Franziska Davies, Michael Brenner and Martin Schulze Wessel

The Russian Empire and the Soviet Union were multiethnic and multireligious empires, which ruled over a large number of Jews and Muslims. In many ways these two non-Christian minorities presented similar challenges to the imperial order. This book brings together specialists in Russian-Jewish and Russian-Muslim history and offers perspectives for a comparative approach to the history of Jews and Muslims in Russia.

Transformation Processes in Egypt after 2011
The Causes, their Course and International Response edited by Radoslaw Fiedler and Przemyslaw Osiewicz

This monograph attempts to conduct the most up-to-date analysis possible of the present political situation in Egypt and the Middle East. The result is a book which allows us not only to look at the Arab Spring from a historical perspective, but primarily to reflect on the consequences of these past events that it was hoped would spark political reforms in Arab states and facilitate greater public participation in the system of governance. Thus, this publication allows the verification of many of the judgments and opinions expressed during the Arab Spring, on the possible direction of development of the political processes initiated by the massive social revolts in Arab countries.

Essays on Russian Foreign Policy in the Caucasus & the Middle East
by Maxim A. Suchkov

For decades, Russia considered its southern flank as its most volatile security zone. Over the recent years, transformations in the Middle East have had a palpable impact on Russia’s “soft underbelly.” The crisis in Ukraine also served as a critical calculation challenge Moscow’s policy in both regions in many ways. Essays on Russian Foreign Policy in the Caucasus and the Middle East is a comprehensive account for understanding these trends. Based on professional expertise and personal experiences from an author uniquely positioned to trace the dynamics in both regions, it reveals the rationale behind many of Russia’s moves while critically assessing their potential implications in the long run.

Institutional Effectiveness in International Regimes
An Analysis of the Effectiveness of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Regime Coping with the Political Malignity in the Case of Iran
by Tuğba Özden

The question of this study is “why the processes of the NPT regime cannot specify the nature and scope of Iran’s nuclear program?” The three main processes of the regime, which are the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), the UN Security Council (UNSC) and the multilateral negotiations, are examined to determine the weaknesses of the regime. This study argues that the regime is modulated to cope with operational challenges and it remains relatively incompetent when a political challenge arises.

The Concept of Coexistence in Islamic Primary Sources
An Analytical Examination
by Ali Shehata Abdou Selim

Given the paucity of literature regarding a faith-based study of Muslim coexistence, this book elaborates on the theological aspect of Muslims’ coexistence in non-Muslim lands, and raises a number of theological questions, arguments and counter-arguments pertinent to this issue.

The book presents a number of scholarly discussions from past and contemporary sources, as well as international human rights treaties, which stress the significance of the much-overlooked factor of context. 330p (Cambridge Scholars Publishing, March 2015) hardcover, 9781443872256, $90.95. Readings in Oriental Literature Arabian, Indian, and Islamic by Jalal Uddin Khan

This volume is an up-to-date elucidation of some diverse and discrete, yet common and classic, subjects and authors, and the distinctive oriental elements present in them. Marked by an originality of approach and a freshness and simplicity, the book takes note of contemporary theoretical, interdisciplinary and cultural discourse drawn from literature, history, politics and religion as necessary. The result is that the overall discussion is as lucid, introductory and expository as it is deep and scholarly, making the book accessible and understandable to non-specialist readers, in addition to specialist researchers and academics. 495p (Cambridge Scholars Publishing, March 2015) hardcover, 9781443872096, $98.95. Religion and Representation

Islam and Democracy

edited by Ingrid Mattson, Paul Nesbitt-Larking and Nawaz Tahir

This book brings together a series of reflections, studies and observations that examine the complex relationship between political representation and Islam. Through the perspectives of theology, history, sociology, philosophy and political science, contributions to this volume explore the connections between religious beliefs, religiosity, political ideals and political behavior.

No Islam but Islam
by Farzana Moon
This book rejects the common idea that the rise of terrorism in this new millennium means that Islam is retrace its steps toward older times. It poses the challenge to Muslims that, if they deigned to explore the purity of Islam exhibited during the life of Prophet Muhammad, there would be no hatred, bigotry or intolerance. The book is written in response to a myriad of lies and distortions practiced by suicide bombers and extremists. It shows that the present state of violence, injustice and the oppression of women has nothing to do with Islam, but, rather, with man-made laws.

Clientelism and Implementing Social Security Programmes in Post-conflict Iraqi Kurdistan Region
by Muslih Irwani
Through an investigation of the most prominent actors in the implementation of social security programs, this book demonstrates how beneficiaries of these programs can themselves become focal points in the implementation process. Within the Kurdistan Regional Government's social policy context today, the benefits of social security schemes are being distributed based on the socio-political status of recipients, not on their socio-economic conditions and needs.

Islam and the West
A Love Story?
edited by Sumita Mukherjee and Sadia Zulfiqar Islam is most commonly represented in the West in terms of suicide bombing, suppressed and veiled women, and internal and external conflict. This collection of edited essays searches for hidden spaces and alternative frames in media, literature and cinema, which, in today’s post-9/11 environment, are a prerequisite in order to construct a healthy relationship between Islam and the West.

Living with the AK-47
Militancy and Militants in Hezbollah’s Resistance Movement
by Younes Saramifar Understanding resistance movements and armed militias in the Middle East is key in unravelling this complex and sensitive region. This book focuses on the Hezbollah group in Lebanon, combining extensive ethnography with critical insights drawn from a range of disciplines including sociology, psychology and philosophy. The book is unique in that it juxtaposes ethnographic narratives in such a way that they script their own rich tale of bodily tactics, ‘resistance’ and possible subjectivity in the realm of everyday life. 180p (Cambridge Scholars Publishing, May 2015) hardcover, 9781443875523, $71.95. The Creation of Philosophical Tradition Biography and the Reception of Avicenna’s Philosophy from the Eleventh to the Fourteenth Centuries CE

by Ahmed H. al-Rahim

The reception history of the 11th-century philosopher Ibn Sina, known in the West by his Latinized name Avicenna, has received little scholarly attention and remains to this day largely virgin territory. This volume investigates the lives and critically inventories the works of the principal philosophers who created the Avicennan philosophical tradition in the Islamic world between the 11th and 14th centuries. The author’s critical prosopographical studies elucidate the literary tropes of the genres of secular and religious biography in Arabic literature, demonstrating how philosophical authority was constructed and deconstructed within the “rational” and “traditional” sciences in Islam. A work of intellectual archaeology, this volume clearly documents the vitality of the post-classical philosophical tradition as reflected in literary biography, the genres of commentary and gloss, and within the madrasa tradition of medieval Islamic civilization.

The Pahlavi Codex MK
Facsimile Edition

by Kaikhusroo M. JamaspAsa and Almut Hintze

The manuscript MK of the family collection of Dastur Dr Kaikhusroo M. JamaspAsa, is the oldest extant Pahlavi codex. Written in 1322 by the Zoroastrian priest and scribe Mihraban Kayhusrav, it offers 38 texts, most of which form part of the genre of Andarz, or Wisdom, literature, while others, such as the Book of Deeds of King Ardashir, the founder of the Sasanian royal dynasty, belong to Middle Persian court literature. This volume offers an introduction with a detailed description of the physical condition of the manuscript and a survey of its contents. The main part consists of facsimiles of the entire manuscript, with headings and marginal notes identifying individual texts and paragraphs.

The Lure of the Title Text and Context in Palestinian Fiction 1948–2012

by Mahmud Ghanayim

This is a study of novels and short stories written by members of the Palestinian minority in Israel between the years 1948 and 2012. The study attempts to trace the position of the Palestinian dialect: its presence and absence in the titles of works of literature, chapters, etc. Based on a semiotic perspective, the study examines the social, cultural and political role of dialect in the formation of this literature. The focus is on the semiotic triangle of title, text and context in order to clarify the position, role and tendencies of this literature in the Arab and local literary sphere, from the synchronic and diachronic perspectives alike. This is a pioneering study in Palestinian literature, undertaken with contemporary literary-linguistic tools to define key thematic issues in Palestinian literature at the present time. It is hoped that the emerging tapestry of ethnic history, literary poetics and ethnopolitics evoked by the recent Palestinian experience brings into view certain deep-rooted tensions in the region, thereby breaking fresh ground in the complementary realms of literature and politics in a Middle Eastern modality.

The Rhetorical Fabric of the Traditional Arabic Qaṣīda in its Formative Stages
A Comparative Study of the Rhetoric in Two Traditional Poems by ‘Alqama I-Fahl and Bashshār b. Burd

by Ali Ahmad Hussein

Ali Ahmad Hussein’s book studies the rhetorical texture in two traditional tripartite poems: one from the pre-Islamic period and one from the early Abbasid era. The poems have the same structure and deal with the same themes (love, camel-section, and praise or self praise). A fundamental question is raised: What are the rhetorical figures on which each of the two poets depended in order to compose his poem? This, in turn, leads to a broader question: How different was the badi’ style (“the rhetorical style”) in the poetry of the two aforementioned eras, assuming the two poems are representative of their times?

Clause Combining in Semitic
The Circumstantial Clause and Beyond edited by Bo Isaksson and Maria Persson
This volume presents the results of an international project carried out in cooperation between Uppsala University, the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, Lund University and the University of Gothenburg. The questions put forward in the project were: How is hypotaxis marked in Semitic, other than by conjunctions? How does this affect the organization of texts? More specifically, what constitutes a circumstantial clause? To find an answer to these questions, all the major Semitic language families and some modern spoken Semitic dialects were surveyed within the project. Thus, the book examines how different kinds of clauses combine to a text in a number of Semitic languages (Ethio-Semitic not included).

Semitic Linguistics in Historical Perspective
by Edward Lipiński
The present work is conceived as a companion volume to the author’s Semitic Languages: Outline of a Comparative Grammar. Its purpose is to show the birth and development of Semitic linguistics in broad lines, but also to pay a closer attention to languages which have played a minor role in the Comparative Grammar, while they are actively studied at present, such as Middle Aramaic, Mandaic, and Neo-Aramaic.

Inside and Out Interactions between Rome and the Peoples on the Arabian and Egyptian Frontiers in Late Antiquity edited by Jitse H.F. Dijkstra and Greg Fisher
The present volume focuses on the contrast between the ‘outside’ sources on the peoples of the frontier—the Roman view—and the ‘inside’ sources, that is, the precious material produced by the Arabs themselves, and by approaching these sources within an anthropological framework of how peripheral peoples face larger powers. The volume offers a richly-documented examination of frontier interactions of the Late Antique East.

L’écriture de l’histoire en syriaque Transmissions interculturelles et constructions identitaires entre hellénisme et islam
by Muriel Debié
Why did Middle Eastern Christians choose to write their history in Syriac from the 6th–13th centuries, even though they still read Greek, and Arabic became their daily vernacular? How did they interpret and understand their past and their present?
The present volume examines historical and ecclesiastical texts to better understand the question of identity in this linguistic choice. French text.

Istanbul and Water edited by P. Magdalino and N. Ergin

Istanbul stands at a unique conjunction of an inland sea with a long maritime inlet, and a winding, turbulent maritime strait that links two seas and separates two continents. Istanbul’s relationship with fresh water is also idiosyncratic: its dearth meant that fresh water for consumption had to be channeled, stored, and distributed with the help of long-distance aqueducts, open-air reservoirs and cisterns. The natural environment combined with the norms of local societies created a culture of water that has constituted an important part of Istanbul’s identity. Various aspects of it are explored in this volume, the outcome of a symposium organized by Koç University’s Research Center for Anatolian Civilizations.

Tropics of Travel 4: Homes Proceedings of the International Conference Organized at the University of Liège (January 13–15, 2011) edited by Frédéric Bauden

This volume gathers together the proceedings of the conference which took place at the University of Liège from 13 to 15 January 2011. The conference was part of the project “Tropics of Travel: Travel in Arabic Writings” that took the form of four international symposia held in Venice (2007), Paris (2008), and London (2009). The Liège conference took the other destination of travel, home, as its subject and looked at ways in which travel may revise notions of self, community, and home, and inscribe significance of ontological and epistemological dimensions into the journey of homecoming. This volume includes nine articles that were selected from seventeen papers read at the conference.

Scribes and Scriptures
The Church of the East in the Eastern Ottoman Provinces (1500–1850)
by Heleen Murre-Van den Berg
This study takes the scribal production of texts, from the Holy Scriptures to the first traces of popular writing, as its main source to analyze the major changes that took place in the Church of the East in the period. The most important of these was the introduction of Western Catholicism, which ultimately led to the creation of two separate hierarchies, today's Chaldean Church and the Assyrian Church of the East. How this community dealt with these monumental changes, how that affected everything from the production of texts to the fabric of society as a whole, and how that contributes to our understanding of this Church's modern day off-shoots, is the topic of this study.

Histoire de Mar Abba, catholicos de l'Orient Martyres de Mar Grigor, général en chef du roi Khusro ler et de Mar Yazd-Panah, juge et gouverneur edited and translated by Florence Jullien
The reign of Chosroes I (531–579) was a key period for the history of the Sasanian Empire. Sporadic persecutions of Christians converted from Zoroastrianism are attested. Among these martyrs was the Catholicos Mar Abba (540–552). The contemporary narratives are the only East-Syrian hagiographies of that time in Syriac; they provide valuable information regarding the socio-religious and political situation of the sixth century Orient. French text.

Samarqand et le Sughd à l’époque ‘abbâsside Histoire politique et sociale
by Yury Karev
During the Abbasid period (750–820), the vast territories beyond the Amu Darya river entered into the cultural sphere of Islam. This book examines the complex and irreversible processes that resulted in a changed political and religious fabric, transformations of the Sogdian and Muslim elite, and the evolution of the state's system of controlling territories on its borders, within a context of confrontations and diplomatic relations between the caliphate, the Tang empire in China, and the Turks. Cosmogonie et eschatologie Articulations conceptuelles du système religieux zoroastrien
by Mihaela Timuş
The book includes seven studies that use historiographical and philological methods to explore the historical and religious aspects of Zoroastrian cosmogony and eschatology. The author reads the historiography of Iranian studies, paying special attention to the French scholarship on this topic, in order to show how the modern history of religions transformed Christian theological concepts in its analysis of the Zoroastrian religion.
