

Table of Contents

Editor's Foreword	vii
Introduction	1
Selective Bibliography	15
Rhetorica divina —Divine Rhetoric	19
Chapter I: On Prayer	21
Chapter II: On the Perfections of Divine Prayer	33
Chapter III: On the Exordium	37
Chapter IV: That the Exordium May Begin with Thanksgiving	39
Chapter V: Conclusion of the Preceding	51
Chapter VI: On the Narrative	53
Chapter VII: Plea for God's Clemency	63
Chapter VIII: On Perfect and Imperfect Justice	69
Chapter IX: Petition for Victory in the Conflict of Penance	81
Chapter X: The Penitent's Excuse That He Should Not Be Punished As Much As He Deserves	87
Chapter XI: An Objection against the Foregoing	89
Chapter XII: That the Works of Penance Are Pleasing to God	95
Chapter XIII: That a Man Should Do What Lies in Him, Though He Can Do Little	109
Chapter XIV: That God Wants Our Return to Him and Penitential Satis- faction	117
Chapter XV: That the Lord Perfectly Heals the Sick Person or Shows Mercy to the Sinner	121
Chapter XVI: Concerning the Form of the Petition	129

Chapter XVII: Confirmation of the Petition	141
Chapter XVIII: Petition for the Intercession of the Blessed Virgin Mary	149
Chapter XIX: Let the Sinner Again Turn to the Patronage of Jesus Christ As a Suppliant in Order to Plead for Himself	159
Chapter XX: Conclusion and Confirmation of the Petition	171
Chapter XXI: The Excusing of One's Own Weakness	173
Chapter XXII: What the Previous Matters Are Valuable For	179
Chapter XXIII: What Reflection on Sins Is Able to Do	185
Chapter XXIV: On Shame and Embarrassment over Sin	187
Chapter XXV: On the Indignation That Is Elicited from Sins	189
Chapter XXVI: Certain Positions of the Body That Help Someone Who Wants to Pray	195
Chapter XXVII: The Petition of Tears from the Recollection of the Spiritual Death of Sinners	201
Chapter XXVIII: The Intercession of the Saints Should Be Sought for Obtaining Tears	221
Chapter XXIX: Bodily Affliction Is Good for Obtaining Tears	223
Chapter XXX: Why Such Great Effectiveness Is Attributed to Fasting	227
Chapter XXXI: The Constancy of Prayers Helps Notably	231
Chapter XXXII: The Importunity of Prayer	239
Chapter XXXIII: That Faith Helps Prayer	243
Chapter XXXIV: With What Great Thanksgiving the Lord Jesus Should Be Greeted in the Mass	245
Chapter XXXV: Certain Matters That Pertain to What Was Said Above	255
Chapter XXXVI: Why God Praised the Importunity of Praying in the Gospel of Luke	257
Chapter XXXVII: That It Helps Prayer to Find Delight in God and to Be Subject to Him	261

Chapter XXXVIII: Concerning Another Seven Means of Assistance for Prayer	263
Chapter XXXIX: That Prayer Is Like a Messenger Sent to God	269
Chapter XL: On the Canticle of the Sinful Soul	299
Chapter XLI: What is to Be Understood by the “Calves of Our Lips”	313
Chapter XLII: Why Prayer Is Signified by the Smoke of Incense and What Is Signified by the Powder of the Perfumer	323
Chapter XLIII: What Is Signified by the Golden Altar	337
Chapter XLIV: On the Devotion That Is Required in Prayer	345
Chapter XLV: On the Brevity of Prayer	347
Chapter XLVI: Why Holy Men Have the Grace of Devotion and Tears with Difficulty	353
Chapter XLVII: On the Merit of That Prayer in Which Someone Does Actually Not Think of God	355
Chapter XLVIII: On the Fire and Sword That Ought to Exist in the Sacrifice of Prayer	359
Chapter XLIX: On the Fire of the Sacrifice of Prayer	367
Chapter L: What Things Are Able to Kindle and Nourish the Aforementioned Fire of Prayer	371
Chapter LI: On the Memory of the Divine Benefits	377
Chapter LII: On the Spiritual Sword by Which the Soul Has to Be Slain in Prayer or Meditation	393
Chapter LIII: On the Soul’s Wrestling in Prayer	417
Chapter LIV: How God Is Conquered by the Wrestling of Prayer	427
Chapter LV: On the Wondrousness and Powers of Prayer	445
Notes	449
Indices	457